It leads in a westerly direction as a grass and earth track initially with earth banks on either side upon which there are some individual mature trees. The northernmost point of the entrance is marked by a mature oak tree. After approximately 155 metres the track becomes open to arable fields on both sides but there is no reduction in usable width. The bank returns again on the southern side after another 100 metres but it remains open to the north. At 360 metres from the eastern end the track turns northwards for approximately 20 metres before resuming a slightly north of westerly course. There is at this point a small planted copse adjacent to the northern side of the track for about 25 metres before opening to arable field again. A bank continues on the southern side with gaps on the bend and halfway to the end of the route. Some 35 metres before the track joins the unsurfaced County Road (No. 14247) there is an overgrown copse area to the north side, the bank to the south rising slightly to finish at a holly tree on the junction. Another field access exists on the eastern corner of the splay. The grass and soft earth track curves into a north north-easterly direction between high banks which, for the most part, have hedging on top. An electricity distribution pole more or less defines the start of the bank on the western side. After some 317 metres the track curves to the north-west with a small area of trees to the west/south-west for about 77 metres and an avenue of trees leading northwards from the peak of the corner. From the end of this wooded area, which is by a farmhouse, (Becks Farm) the route becomes coincident with a concrete drive leading north-westwards to the exit onto the Norwich Road, C555 (old A140). The exit is opposite the County Road 14248 and some 355 metres from the boundary of the last house (No. 4) in Ingworth village itself. There is a tubular metal gate across the drive some 20 metres short of the exit but when closed there remains a clear gap of about 1.6 metres to the south of the gatepost. The last 213 metres of concrete track from Becks

Farm has a grass verge on both sides and hedging for most of that length, although the field to the north is at a lower ground level. The usable width from Banningham Road to Becks Farm is never less than 2.1 metres and that from Becks Farm to Norwich Road never less than 3 metres.
